This is based on calculations but measurements are fairly consistent with this. These figures are for steady state operation. The second graph is with bus clamping modulation, this reduces switching losses.

